On this point the Court were divided in opinion, and under the statute that question was certified to the Supreme Court of the United States for docision. It has been said that both of the Judges were of the opinion that the defendant had committed no offense under the laws of the United States, but the case being an important one, not only in New York, but throughout the country, it was deemed best to take advantage of the only manner in which a criminal proceeding can be taken to the Supreme Court, and send it there on a certificate of opposition of opinion between the Judges.—Plain Dealer, was 1 " refution
